The eportfolio is well presented and demonstrates a good range of skills and knowledge.

The reflective writing is good and you demonstrate a good level of critical analysis of your own experiences. The focus is largely on the subject specific elements of the work rather than the broader elements of your own learning.

It's worth thinking about things in the broader context. What have the things that you have learned done to impact you going forwards? Will you be able to apply some of the elements to your work life? What are the soft skills you have learned and what have you discovered about the way that you learn?
