

Unit 2 – Reflection:

After studying unit 2 this week and delving into the topics of 'Why Projects Fail and Gathering Requirements Exercise', my research has led me to a new level of understanding about my previous projects where I have missed critical concepts and consequently failed at some point. I now realise the importance of collecting requirements before initiating a project, creating a solution for each problem found, and researching improvements so that the project can be accomplished.

During the collaborative discussion, my colleague Elliot made a valid point about his personal bias in his position within the project, which contributed to failure. This was insightful and has made me more aware of the importance of avoiding biases in project management.

Moreover, I am excited about our project for our first assignment. This will involve us all working together and collaborating with different roles, which will help us understand in depth all the studies we have been exposed to and researching during this time.
