

Unit 2 – Reflection:

In the second week of studying Unit 2, I thoroughly analysed my research methods and realised that several areas require significant improvements. During an insightful discussion with my colleague Steve, he highlighted some referencing errors, initially making me feel a bit embarrassed, but I quickly realised the value of his feedback. Around the same time, my tutor from another module gave me feedback on my referencing method and recommended using Mendeley, which has been an incredible tool for me.

As a Master's student, I am aware of the impact these details can have on grades and the overall quality of my work. Therefore, I have decided to take the advice I received seriously and implement it to improve my research methods. The lecture on 'Research Questions, the Literature Review, and the Research Proposal' was particularly noteworthy as it highlighted some essential points I am determined to learn more about to enhance my research methods and referencing.
